MEET MAYOR KELLY

Chicago's Mayor Edward J. Kelly is on the political upswing. Tuesday he polled 798,150 votes out of 1,052,447 in a three man race. Emil C. Wetten, Republican opponent, was second with 166,571 votes. Nestor Jenkins, third party independent, attracted only 87,728 votes.

Mayor Kelly broke all records for Chicago and other large cities with the proportions of his victory. Only one other politician, the late Anton Cermak. Mayor Kelly's predecessor, ever participated in such a triumph of popular favor. It was Cermak's wounds, sustained in the attempted assassination of President Roosevelt at Miami Feb. 15, 1933, and his subsequent death which gave Mr. Kelly his chance to lead Chicago Democracy.

There are many significant things to be observed in the Chicago election. It was, for instance, a vindication of the new deal, because Mayor Kelly, like former Mayor Cermak, is a Democrat. In such cases it's customary to assume voters approved the Roosevelt administration simultaneously with Mayor Kelly's administration.

More directly significant, of course, is the demonstration of the Chicago Democratic organization's power. With more than three quarters of a million votes to call on, it now is one of the most important political machines in the nation. When "Big Bill" Thompson used to carry Chicago for the Republican party, he never dared believe the metropolis was as safe for his party as it has become for Roosevelt Democrats. Yet, "Big Bill" was quite a boss in his day.

Soon, it is predicted, Mayor Kelly will go to get $228,000,000 for public works in Chicago. He probably will get it, if the administration can make the necessary arrangements. Up to now Mayor Kelly hasn't attracted much attention. From now on, his rapid growth as one of the really big men in Democracy will be a fascinating thing to watch. The right people will be seeking him out diligently. His career is made.

MIXING RELIEF AND REFORM

Millions of unemployed Americans are in dire need of the relief provided for them in the $4,880,000,000 work relief bill, now in congressional conference committee. Available funds are exhausted, yet the bill is being held up by a deadlock. Why?

Sen. Glass of Virginia and four fellow senators serving with him on the conference committee have taken a stubborn stand in defense of an amendment requiring one third of the $4,880,000,000 earmarked in the bill for states and municipalities shall be spent for direct labor. New deal senators and representatives, acting on command of the executive branch of the government, will not consent to the amendment. They charge it is contrary to new deal policy.

In this case, new deal policy calls for a mixture of relief and reform, apparently. It isn't easy to understand why an amendment requiring one third of a certain sum in a work relief bill to be spent for work relief would be opposed unless it is assumed that relief and reform are being lumped in the Roosevelt administration's plans.

Such an assumption has been made and so far has not been successfully denied. Sen. Glass, who does not happen to be a friend of the so-called power trust, believes the $4,880,000,000 earmarked for loans or gifts to cities and states will not be used so much in the high purpose of giving men work but to permit the administration to carry on its power fight, or some other experiment in reform. To prevent this, he would require one third of the money to be spent on labor.

If the administration were interested solely in using the $4,880,000,000 to give work relief there would be no need for it to resist the amendment. Its efforts to overcome Sen. Glass and his tiny band of dissenters indicate plainly there is something more than work relief at stake. Sen. Glass has thrown a monkey wrench into machinery whose existence never would have been suspected had he not exercised the privilege of dissenting from his party's legislative program.

Sen. Glass probably will be unable to stop the steam roller, but he has performed a valuable service. He has revealed in one instance what the steam roller is capable of doing unless it is watched. When congressmen voted on the work relief bill, they made a decision on the question of relief, not on the question of providing the Roosevelt administration a large sum of money to finance its battle with the electric power industry. Sen. Glass has hastened the end of the brief era in which congress handed the executive department huge sums of money to spend as it pleased. The executive department, itself, is helping to terminate that happy condition by proving its willingness to betray the confidence placed in it by a generous and befuddled congress.

THE STARS SAY

For Friday, April 5

It is probable, judging by the predominant planetary configurations, that emphasis may be placed on private rather than keen absorption in business affairs on this day. There are testimonies of great activity in affectional, social, domestic and artistic interests, in which there may develop an angle of the mysterious, intriguing or perhaps the spiritual, unique or inspirational.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a very happy and eventful year in their personal rather than business life, although in this connection there may be secret agreements, connivance or intrigue. This subtlety also complexes affairs of the heart and home, with social and artistic aspirations leading into singular experiences or mysterious associations.

A child born on this day may have a happy, prosperous and intriguing life, with tendencies and talents of a peculiar order. They are affectionate, gracious and popular.

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, April 4—No one in the legitimate theatre has proved such a consistent drawing card as William Gaxton. For six years, with a minor exception, he has been in a succession of hits. His play this year heads the list of box office smashes, destined to run until next season.

His power of illusion is illustrated by the fact that he is generally cast as the dashing, devil-may-care lover. And as such pit-a-pats matinee girls' hearts, although all know his extraordinarily happy marriage to the attractive Madeline Cameron is a legend of the profession.

Gaxton's singing voice is pleasant but not titillating. Yet his sheer personality puts over a song as no other male delineator of the musical comedy. San Francisco born, he is of pure Spanish strain and his real name is Arturo Gaxiola. Off stage he is one of the town's three better dressed men.

His boon companion between plays is Bob Hague, the oil man, with whom he sails on one of the latter's tankers to Rio or where-not. On such jaunts, Gaxton becomes a pseudo count whose epileptic accents fatten the hilarity of nations. Added versatility is his presidency of a thriving perfume business.

Every time I pass along lower Park avenue late afternoons I see a group of white mustached and often white goateed Kentucky colonel looking fellows in the bayed windows of a club. Dreamers of things past, they seem to see no one along the pavements. A poetical and prophetic cop, before whom I idled a moment, was asked if they ever moved. "No," he observed. "Waiting for the ferry, I reckon."

The song lyrics of the five-and-ten Princess did not bring any self-conscious blush to seasoned songsters in Tin Pan Alley. In fact the Woolworth heiress exploited the usual maskishness and lyrical sentimentality along with the occasional assonance that has characterized the gilded outpourings of bing-bango land since the days when Harry Von Tilzer and Charles K. Harris thrilled the nation. The Mdvani separation publicity caused a two day sale flurry but that was all. One night club tried them out but abandoned them for older and better established Cole Porter lyrics.

The radio has put the kibosh on those tacky song-shops once creviced in all of Broadway's available niches. In the front near the door a tireless and expressionless pianist ploddered endless tunes. There were long rows of bright-jacketed songs racked in colorful array. Also souvenirs—Statue of Liberty penny banks, auto banners, glass paper-weights of New York scenes, copper ash trays with Times Square in bas relief and pocket knives with naughty peep-hole views. Practical jokers dropped in for dribble-glasses, pencils with rubber points, etc.

The gradual decline of the female impersonator, too, has come to a full stop. Such performers cannot be booked save in remote sections of honkey-tonks. Even a burlesque of the ideas gets the bird. The fact is these androgynous antics have always proved precarious, yet there were many exponents. Julian Eltinge was the only actor to surround feminine gestures with dignity. So much so a big theatre was named for him. Bert Savoy, in the same field, tinged his fly-up-the-creek-lady portrayal with a guttural commonness that created a Winter Garden following. When Eltinge retired and lightning killed Savoy there were none to take their places. Carolyn Norman, as The Circle Fashion Plate, came nearest to recapturing a smidgen of the interest with an engagement or so at the Palace, but never quite made the grade. Deservedly or not, moderns began to look on female impersonations as pathetically pycopathic. They either jeered or walked.

Senator Vandenberg

Republicans are mobilizing their forces on all fronts for the 1936 campaign. In the mid-west, party leaders are proceeding cautiously with plans for a caucus at Kansas City in May. This session is expected to result in adoption of a more liberal party platform to be presented at the 1936 convention. The caucus may also result in the unofficial selection of a farm belt candidate. Among the hats which may be tossed in the ring next year are those of Colonel Frank Knox, Chicago publisher; Arthur Vandenberg, United States senator from Michigan; Ogden Mills, former secretary of the treasury; and Governor Alf Landon, of Kansas. Herbert Hoover, former president, who is not expected to be a candidate himself has sounded a "call to arms".

Knowledge of Blood Greater

There was no correct understanding regarding the circulation of the blood until the seventeenth century. The old timers believed the blood was warmed by the heart and cooled by the lungs. They thought the liver was the source of the blood stream and that the blood ebbed and flowed like the tide.

In 1628 William Harvey discovered the truth. He demonstrated that the blood is pumped by the heart into the arteries and carried in a cleansing stream to every part of the body. Also he found that the blood flows back to the heart through the veins.

This discovery led to further study and more complete revelations of the functions of heart and lungs. Until the mechanism of the circulation was thoroughly understood, the victims of heart and lung disturbances were offered little relief.

The present-day methods of diagnosis and treatment are vastly different from those of the seventeenth century. Yet we have much to learn and the doctors of tomorrow will add vastly to present-day knowledge. Often the heart is perfectly normal but is overtaxed by the effect of diseases or by some disturbance in the blood vessels. For example, there may be loss of the normal ## elasticity of the blood vessels.

Insufficient rest and relaxation, overweight, faulty hygiene, over-exercise as well as lack of exercise, all these are factors in disturbance of the circulation. Failure to get rid of local infection, such as diseased teeth, tonsils, adenoids and nasal sinuses, is another cause of heart trouble.

Use Care in Diseases

Bear in mind that great care must be taken in typhoid fever, influenza, scarlet fever, pneumonia and tuberculosis, to guard the organs of circulation. This warning is particularly important as regards diphtheria, a wholly unnecessary disease.

Everyone should be familiar with the state of his health and the limitation of effort to place upon the circulation. This can only be determined by a complete physical examination, including a test of the blood pressure and a careful examination of the urine. Talk with your doctor about this.

SIWANIANS SET FOR FISH FEED

Will Eat Smelt April 11, Gift From Michigan Citizens

A smelt feed, made possible by a gift of a large box of the delectable smelt from the Michigan Fish Commission, will be given by members of the Kiwanis Club on April 11. It was announced by J. F. Wells, secretary of the club.

The box of smelt was sent as a gift of the annual smelt run, given by the Michigan Fish Commission to mark the opening of the upper peninsula of Michigan sport fishing season. The event is celebrated with a parade, a meeting and a dinner at the club.

The smelt run is comparatively new to the upper peninsula of Michigan, although the region is famous for its brook trout, bass, pike and other kinds of fishing. Records disclose that the smelt was first introduced in Crystal Lake, Lower Michigan, in 1912, having been obtained from Maine. The purpose was to use them as a food supply for landlocked salmon, which were planted at the same time.

In New England, smelt and salmon had seemed to thrive together, but in Crystal Lake the salmon failed to live and the smelt were soon forgotten. Ten years later, in 1922, large numbers of smelt were introduced running up Cold Creek, a tributary to Crystal Lake. The fish migrated to various parts of Lake Michigan and spawning runs occur each spring in about a score of upper peninsula streams.

Multiplying Rapidly The smelt are multiplying at such a rate that fishermen and scientists are worried about the outcome of other species of lake fish, since it has been found that the smelt robs the food supply and also consumes the fry of the others. During the spawning run, the smelt is caught by the tons and shipped to the New York fish markets.

Men's Clothes Take Sport Model Trend, Designer Reveals

Men's fashions for spring show a decided trend toward sport models—a reflection, no doubt, of the greater leisure enjoyed today by the American public.

Many of the new models and a line assortment of new fabrics are being put on display at Bloomberg's Friday by William Polakewich, special representative of Michael Stern & Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Michael Stern & Co. are the makers of stylish Value-First clothes for men and of Chapel Hill clothes for fashionable young men. They enjoy a nationwide reputation for manufacturing clothes of high quality, superb design and perfect fit. Located in Rochester, which is famed for the quality of its clothing product, they are the oldest and largest of the many dress makers having been established 86 years ago and employing 200 in the neighborhood of 2,000 people.

Mr. Polakewich, who comes Friday to Bloomberg's, is a member of the Michael Stern designing department. He knows clothes from A to Z, understands how to take proper measurements, is thoroughly conversant with prevailing style trends, and is an able counsellor on clothes problems.

"Times Square Lady", With All Star Cast, Here Friday; Good Film Tonight

A recent production entitled "Times Square Lady" is the State's offering for Friday and Saturday. It has a brilliant cast including Robert Taylor (who made such a hit in "Society Doctor"), Virginia Bruce, Helen Twelvetrees, Isabel Jewell, Pinky Tomlin, Henry Kolker, Raymond Hatton, Jack LaRue, Nat Pendleton, Robert Elliott, Russell Hopton and Fred Kohler.

Pinky Tomlin's Debut Besides serving as the starring vehicle for Taylor, it marks the debut of Pinky Tomlin, truck hand on a farm in Oklahoma who rose to fame almost overnight for his song, "The Object of My Affection," and "What's the Reason I'm Not Pleased?" The boy shows a decided flair for acting, especially in comedy lines and he sings both his song hits in the film.

The story tells of the fight of a young girl to retain her father's important holdings in the sporting world of New York. How she matches wits with her father's rebellious henchmen makes a fast and entertaining story.

When the man goes suddenly the managers of his various New York holdings meet to discuss means by which they may gain control of his properties. They learn from the man's attorney that he has left everything to Toni (Miss Bruce), his daughter who has been reared in Iowa and whose existence is unknown to the New York crowd. Steve (Taylor), manager of the prosperous night club, volunteers to use his potent charm to fleece the girl out of her inheritance, in spite of the fact that he is supposed to be in love with Margo (Miss Twelvetrees), a stage star.

Toni Is Surprised Toni, reaching New York, isn't the gullible country girl the wise boys had expected at all, but they begin their routine to depreciate the properties, trick her and force her to sell at their price. But Toni, shattering maniacs as maid and mentor Steve takes Toni to the dog track where they hear of staggering losses; to the hockey game where they hear rumors of crookedness and see the slugging of one of the players by a teammate. All this has been carefully planned by the manager to frighten Toni, but it has the opposite effect. She meets them and coolly tells them she intends to run the properties herself and they can take it or leave it. Steve finds himself in love with

Apricot Coconut Balls

Your friends will appreciate the subtle compliment. So let's get busy and make a batch of apricot coconut balls. Put one and a half cups of dried apricots through the food chopper. Mix with one cup shredded coconut. Moisten with half cup sweetened condensed milk. Drop by spoonfuls into confectioners' sugar so that the mixture is completely sugar covered. Shape into balls.

Then there's butter crunch which is really a quite elaborate confection. Cut one-half pound sweet chocolate into small pieces and melt on top of double boiler. Remove from fire and add half cup sweetened condensed milk, half cup chopped almonds and quarter teaspoon almond extract. Stir until mixture thickens. Spread half of mixture in thin sheet on a buttered platter. Keep remaining half over water while preparing the following mixture made by cooking together in a heavy pan one and a third cups (one can) sweetened condensed milk, half cup molasses and a few grains salt. Stir over low heat until hard ball forms when tested in cold water.

Fortunes told by Miss Sluts, games, puzzles and songs, all informally Bohemian, added to the enjoyment of the evening. Miss Jean Olloman and Mrs. Dorothy Currey won attractive prizes.

House Leaders Seek FDR'S Wishes on Bill

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 4.—House leaders sought to ascertain President Roosevelt's wishes today on a bill for passing finally upon a compromise proposed by senate spokesmen in an effort to break the deadlock over the $4,880,000,000 work relief bill.

Senators on the committee charged with settling the eleven-hour controversy suggested a substitute yesterday for the labor amendment which the administration wants thrown out of the bill.

Instead of requiring that one-third of loans and grants from the $500,000,000 earmarked for state and community projects be spent directly for labor, the compromise proposal would require that one-third find its way either to workers employed directly or those engaged in the manufacture of materials used. The President would be given power to specify minimum outlays for director labor.

Strike Is Settled At Crosley Plants

(By Associated Press)

CINCINNATI, O., April 4.—A ten day strike settled, plants of the Crosley Radio corporation, were declared ready today to "gradually" return 3,400 workers to their tasks, and to resume full-scale production "as soon as possible."

Settlement was achieved last night, only a few hours after union leaders had expressed themselves as uncertain of the outcome of long and intricate negotiations.

Lewis M. Crosby, vice president and general manager, announced at once that plants would reopen "as soon as possible." This was followed by word from a high official source within the company that work would begin today and that pre-strike production would resume shortly.

Singing of the peace agreements found strikers still technically failing to gain one point for which they had fought—signature of Crosby officials in direct negotiations, on a company statement of labor policy.

Other points at issue during the walkout included recognition of the radio and refrigerator workers' union; right of collective bargaining; payment of wages weekly instead of three times a month, and recognition of seniority and merit in deals involving promotions or intended transfers or lay-offs of personnel.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O.—Although she was frozen to death while living in apparent dire poverty in a lonely shack near here Nov. 18, Sarah J. Figer left an estate of $10,000. It was revealed in probate court. Twelve heirs will get the money.

PRUN-O-WHEAT BREAD—which you can get at your grocer's—is just such a natural laxative food. It has a fine combination fruit and nut-like flavor that everyone likes.

PRUN-O-WHEAT BREAD is made with flaked wheat and the concentrated juice of sun-ripened prunes. These natural foods don't

For Those Favoring Soft Suits . . .

By MARIE MAROT

These Models Show Popular Dressmaker Styles

TAILORED SUITS with their masculine lines and minimum of softening detail are competing with soft, dressmaker suits for popular favor. The wise woman who is able to do so includes both types in her wardrobe. These soft suits are nice for the woman who goes about a great deal during the day, as they fit into every scheme and scene. A suit that is representative of the newest fashions is the one at left, a sheet navy blue woolen with a blue polka-dotted white silk blouse and smart matching revers. The suit at right is also in navy blue woolen with a pert quilted collar and dainty cuffs as important details. It has a draped white taffeta blouse. In the center is a lovely print in pale blue and white with a petal neckline and a broad patent leather belt. It is nice with a redingote or fur scarf, a handy garment.

Labor Board Aid Moves to Head Off Akron Strike Plan

(By Associated Press)

AKRON, April 4.—Ralph A. Lind, regional labor board director, stepped into the controversy here between union rubber workers and three large rubber companies today.

Lind said he planned to talk with rubber company officials in an attempt to head off a threatened strike which would affect 35,000 employees of the Goodyear, Goodrich and Firestone rubber companies.

The union demanded yesterday that the companies permit a government-supervised election of employee representatives in each of the three plants. Lind said he hoped to persuade the companies to consent to neutral elections, with the majority ruling in collective bargaining.

"The manufacturers should not worry so much about their constitutional rights," he said. "Why be so reticent about holding elections when the balloting would save themselves and Akron a lot of money, a lot of cracked heads and all this uproar."

Lind came into the picture on the heels of a statement by Coleman C. Claherty, president of the rubber workers' union, that the "A. F. of L. throughout the country will support us in our fight."

"We will close down enough Ohio factories employing union workers and bring into Akron so many men that they will make Sheriff James T. Flowers' 1,000 special deputies look like they are lost in the shuffle," Claherty said.

In a "strike test" vote taken by the Firestone conference plus yesterday, 1,162 workers voted against a strike, 1,659 for one. The Firestone company, in a statement, interpreted this vote as a mandate "to keep our factories operating."

Pleads Not Guilty In Tar, Feather Party

ATHENS, O., April 4.—Robert C. Moore of Cleveland pleaded not guilty last night to a charge of assault and battery in connection with the tarring and feathering of Herley Thompson, 55, an insurance agent, and was held to the grand jury today under $100 bond.

Moore is president of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity at Ohio university. The hearing last night was held before Justice of the Peace T. R. Bennett. The assault and battery charge was filed by Rolland Ruth, assistant to Prosecutor Harold Rose.

Thompson said he was taken to a cemetery at Clark's Chapel by five youths, two of whom seized him on the street. At the cemetery he said he was covered with roofing tar and feathers.

Sheriff Charles Stratton said Moore admitted being a member of the party, but refused to name his companions. The sheriff quoted Moore as saying that Thompson was being punished for articles which appeared in the Ohio Examiner concerning fraternity members.

license measure now goes to the senate.

The other administration bills provide for continued issuance of county poor relief bonds, for appropriating $6,000,000 from the state general revenue fund to operate the division of aid for the aged during the last half of 1935, and for permitting the refunding of special assessment bonds during the current year.

The earliest possible sine die adjournment date, house leaders have said, is May 1. By April 20 they hope to have the appropriations bill ready for the senate.

School Bill Buffered

Meanwhile the bill to appropriate $5,000,000 to non-tuition schools and denominational colleges is being buffered around in the senate finance committee. Two meetings of the committee have been called in the last three days and then postponed.

Senator William Horner (D, Huron), chairman, could not get to Columbus in time for one meeting, friends said.

A meeting was scheduled for last night, but just a few minutes before the assembly adjourned it was called off.

Senator Robert A. Pollock (R, Stark), declared the meeting was called off because proponents did not have enough votes to report the measure out and were "stalling for time."

The senate voted to take up the highly controversial liquor control bill today.

Claims She Stabbed Him To Gain Knowledge of "Hidden Wealth"

(By Associated Press)
KANSAS CITY, April 4.—Mrs. Nellie A. Hurd, 64, died early today from bullet wounds inflicted by her 77-year-old husband, Herbert, who said he had been tortured by his wife in an effort to make him disclose the location of hidden wealth.

Mrs. Hurd died at General hospital after an operation had been performed to remove four bullets from her body. In another ward of the hospital lay her husband, a railroad crossing watchman, crazed by knife and flame wounds, which he said had been inflicted by his wife "because spirits told her I had a hidden fortune I was giving to the woman next door."

Police See Wounds
Detectives gaped last night when Hurd, stripping off his clothing, disclosed the evidence of Mrs. Hurd's alleged inquisition. His story, City Detective Fred Cline and John Costello said, probably was true.

Miss Nellie A. Hurd, adopted daughter of the Hurd, denied her step-father had been tortured and insisted that he signed of his free will a "confession" of infidelity with a neighbor woman and of his giving her $15,000.

The purported "confession," found by police in the Hurd home, was repudiated by the 77-year-old husband. He charged it had been obtained while she was standing with a gun at my head.

Tells of Torture
"We've had trouble ever since we married 12 years ago," Hurd said at police headquarters last night. "Then she got the idea that spirits had told her I was having relations with this other woman, and that I had given the woman $15,000. All I own is two little houses."

"My wife was killing me by inches," he cried as he began removing his clothes. "Sometimes she beat me all night. She chained me to the bed and I was too ill to fight back. She tied my feet with wire. Look at this arm where she beat me with a strand of wire."

"Look there," he continued, pointing at one leg. "She had a double-edged dagger and plunged it into the muscle by the skin bone every time I refused to sign that confession."

Near the shin bone of his right leg was a cluster of wounds nearly an inch deep. On the calf of the leg was a gash about four inches long. The bottoms of his feet were blistered.

Pointing a finger at his adopted daughter, he shouted: "You two were trying to get those houses. I've slaved all my life for you. You helped my wife torture me. You went into the kitchen and brought the matches that she lit to burn the bottom of my feet. When she wanted to stab me with that dagger, you brought it to her."

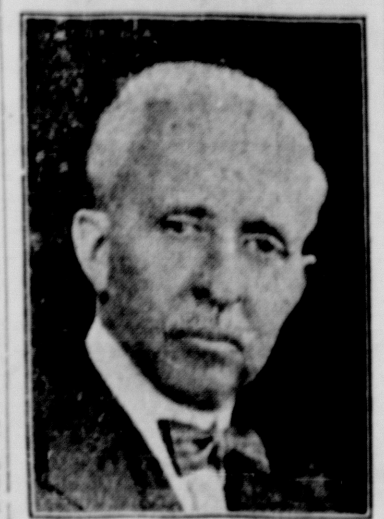

Miss Hurd denied the accusations.

Plan Road Repair In Middleton Twp.

CLARKSON, O., April 4.—Improvement of the Clarkson-Sprucevale rd. in Middleton township to connect with the same improved road in St. Clair township is assured as a result of action by the county commissioners, it was said here today.

Three cars of slag have been set aside by the commissioners for this road, the slag to be spread by the Middleton township trustees. When the slag has been spread, this road will then be "out of the mud" from Rogers south to Calcutta.

Business Leader Makes Ohio Tour

Dan Pearson, manager of the J. C. Penney Co. store here, and his associates attended a meeting in Canton Tuesday night at which the founder of the company, J. C. Penney, presided.

Mr. Penney is visiting a number of Penney stores in Ohio on the occasion of his company's 53rd anniversary celebration, for the purpose of renewing his personal contacts with the Penney managers and their associates, mingling with the shopping crowds, and making a personal study of retail trends in this section.

Mr. Penney opened his first store in the tiny mining town of Kennerly, Wyo., with a total capital of $500. The hard working miners and their families soon discovered that Mr. Penney's little 20x40 store carried just the things they wanted, and that he and that young fellow Sams who worked for him were about as fair and square as they were.

The business grew. Today the Penney company operates nearly 1,500 stores, located in every state in the union. Observers of department store operations in this country attribute much of the company's success to its rigid adherence to Mr. Penney's original plan of vesting full merchandising control of each store in the hands of a local manager who is in a position to study the wants and needs of the people of his community. Then, by pooling the experience and knowledge gained by all managers, each one keeps in touch with popular style trends, new manufacturing processes, wearing quality tests and other things that his customers can profit by.

During 1934, the Penney company bought several million dollars worth of merchandise from Ohio factories. These products were distributed throughout the entire United States, and provided considerable employment for Ohio workers.

Krohn, president and general manager of a Dayton radio station, (WSMK) and made known he had followed the station's programs almost entirely all the way from Pittsburgh, Pa.

Lear's compass first was tested under department of commerce supervision in flights on the west coast, and the hop yesterday was a continuation of the study.

MUNITIONS QUIZ GROWS HOTTER

Senate Committee Hears Charges of Solicited Business

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, April 4.—The senate munitions committee continued its fight today to enact a more drastic curb on war profits than the one which has been given right-of-way in the house.

Meanwhile the committee turned from testimony that a friend of James Roosevelt had written to the White House in an effort to influence naval shipbuilding awards, and looked further into evidence purporting to show that a former congressman had solicited business from a shipbuilding firm while he was in office.

Reason for Inquiry

A letter written by G. W. Edmonds of Philadelphia, the former representative to the Bath Iron Works of Bath, Maine, aroused Chairman Nye (R. N. D.) he said there was reason for additional inquiry into the assertion contained in it that Edmonds had formed a company which did business with the government and with shipyards.

Despite the investigating committee's advocacy of other plan which would limit war-time profits by heavy taxation, there were predictions that the house within the next day or two will pass the McSwain bill against war profits.

House opponents of the McSwain measure denounced it as a "farce" and "a futile thing" yesterday, but that body promptly voted 258 to 71 against permitting amendments to it.

While the house was thus crushing opposition, the senate munitions committee head that Roger S. McGrath, a New York Life Insurance company agent who was described as a friend of the president's son James, had sought to obtain naval building jobs for the Bath Iron Works.

Louis McHenry Howe, presidential secretary to whom McGrath wrote a letter, is ill and there was no comment from the White House. No evidence was produced that Howe had taken any action in the matter.

A Review of the Day's News

By Arthur Brisbane

LLOYD GEORGE says there will be no war "this time," but some in Europe do not agree. Mussolini wants France and England to join him in an agreement to suppress any outbreak affecting them.

France is said to have moved troops for defense to the German frontier, although it is hard to guess what those troops could do if Germany declared war. It would be with planes dropping explosives and poison gas on Paris. No nation at war will sit in trenches for four or five years, now that flying is real.

Britain going a long way around, wisely sends a suave statesman, Capt. Eden, to Moscow to see Stalin of Russia. The talk, not published may have been like this:

"If England agrees to help you fight Japan, will you help against Germany, in case of need?"

A British naval officer cut the throat of a shipmate. In England they hang you for that. When hanging time came, Mrs. Violet Vanderlist, prosperous widow, opposed to the death penalty, hired two planes to fly back and forth above the gallows, trailing banners reading, "Stop the death sentence."

While airplanes flew overhead, trucks drove back and forth before the jail, with loud speakers bellowing "abide with me."

The man that "killed his comrade sleeping," or however he did it, did not "abide." He went through the trap.

The British believe in discouraging murder, and prompt punishment seems to do it.

Graft and dishonesty are old, as old as human need, and cunning. A papyrus written 1200 years before Christ, tells of three men tried for robbing a royal tomb. Egyptian kings were descended from the gods, to rob their tombs was sacrilege, the punishment death.

A dishonest jeweler put base metal in a supposedly "pure gold" crown for King Hiero, was exposed by the great Archimedes, who thought out a method in his bath, and started the word "Eureka" down through the ages.

Michael Angelo, building St. Peter's at Rome, complained to the pope of the materials furnished by contractors, reminding him holiness that he, Michael Angelo, would make no profit from St. Peter's except "benefit to my soul," and urged the pope to punish the grafters. There is even graft now in this modern, enlightened republic.

What is life, what is death, what are we?

An English man "dies," doctors pronounce him dead. He returns to life, says he has been in heaven, tells what he saw, a dull account, clothing the same as we wear here. How far, how fast did his spirit travel, while he was "dead"?

A scientist kills a dog as dead as a dog could be killed, then brings it back to life scientifically, and really.

Little Beatrice Marie Sparagna was born dead a week ago, no heart beat, no respiration. She was accidentally strangled as she came into the world.

Adrenalin produced no results, alpha lobeline, supposed to stimulate breathing, failed. Then a mixture of gases was forced into the tiny lungs, and after death that lasted 18 minutes, Beatrice Marie returned to life. Today she howls if her food is delayed.

What does the soul do while the body is supposedly dead? Does it go away and come back, or just wait around inside the body? What is death? Some say it is only a "belief," and there is no such thing.

You never can tell where, when or why war will start. Little Switzerland accuses big Germany of kidnapping a German refugee from Basel and locking him in a German prison, on charges of treason.

The Swiss foreign minister, Mr. Motta, says such an incident might "completely shake Switzerland's

Juniors Leading In Inter-Class Events At Reilly Stadium

Seven Events Run Off In Opening Program Wednesday; Seniors Trail In Second Place; Final Eight Events Scheduled This Afternoon

Seven events were held in the Salem High school inter-class meet Wednesday afternoon at Reilly stadium and when sunset rang down the curtain on the initial events, the juniors were leading the tournament field with the seniors not far behind. The junior class captured the meet last year and look good to repeat.

The remaining eight events in the tourney will be held at the field at 4 p. m. today. The broad jump which was carried over from yesterday will be included among the other matches which are: the 220-yard dash, the mile run, 120-yard high hurdles, high jump, 440-yard run, javelin throw and the 660-yard relay.

The juniors were ahead in the meet with 35 points, trailed by the seniors with 28. The sophomores came through in the events with 13 points while the freshmen polled only four.

A. Rich and H. McCarthy, both seniors, tied yesterday afternoon in the 100-yard dash. J. Rich, a sophomore and L. Catina came in third and fourth place respectively. The winning time was 11.2. Eakin, a senior with all-around qualifications, cleared the bar at 9 feet, six inches to win the pole vault. In an exhibition Eakin cleared 11 feet. Feiler, another senior was second in the pole vault, while Merino and Williamson, both juniors, tied for third place.

A sophomore, Roelen, ran the half mile in two minutes, 14 seconds, to win. Trailing him in the order of finishing were Waggoner and Kamaskey, both juniors, and Brantingham, a senior.

Senior Ed Leach won the shot put event when he pushed the ball 37 feet, 10 and one half inches. Williamson and West, both juniors, took second and third place while Trombitas tossed for fourth place.

The discus throw was won by Dolansky, a junior, who twirled the plate 92 feet and 11 inches. A. Rich was second in this event and Williamson was third. Julian, a junior, was fourth.

The 220-yard low hurdles were won by A. Rich when he covered the distance and the barriers in 29.2 seconds. C. Yeager, a sophomore, came in second while Eakin, was third. McCarthy was fourth in the event.

The mile relay was won by a junior team composed of Catlos, Waggoner, Wernet and Stewart. The time was four minutes and four seconds. The sophomores were second in the run while the freshmen took third and fourth place.

LOCAL TRUCK DRIVER FINDS HONEY KRUSHED WHEAT BREAD BIG BENEFIT TO HEALTH

Discovers Long Needed Digestion Regulator Enabling Him To Continue Strenuous Work. Read His Letter Below

The advocates of violent exercises as an aid to digestion, frequently overlook the fact that people often require bowel stimulation even though they work long hours. A local truck driver found his long rides, continually seated, retarded his elimination. He writes as follows:

"Through curiosity I purchased a loaf of your new Honey Krushed Wheat Bread. I found this bread not only delicious but beneficial from a health standpoint. The honey has a stimulating effect on one's intestines and the combination of crushed wheat kernels and honey gives one the necessary roughage and stimulation which helps in relieving and correcting bowel disorders. It has kept me as regular as clockwork."

You practice real economy when you buy Honey Krushed Wheat Bread. It's bread of known quality, preferred by thousands of discriminating, thrift-minded families for its purity, fine flavor, and high food value. But more than this, it is processed so that it digests very quickly and regulates impaired digestion and clogged intestines.

An ideal Wheat and honey! No more sugar, just the nectar of fruit and flowers for the necessary flavoring. Healthy? It's bound to be and stimulating in a natural way to sluggish digestive organs. These features are tremendously important to good health. A child with poor or slow digestion needs the regulative qualities found in Honey Krushed Wheat Bread. Elderly people who lack sufficient exercise, workers in sedentary occupations, who sit or stand all day—there are literally millions of people who need its gentle natural action.

Buy it today. Try it ten days. You'll like the delicious flavor. Keep a supply on hand. You'll like it and it's good for you. Look for the cellophane wrapped loaf. Also look for the liberal coating of extra crushed wheat on its outer crust. It is sliced for easy serving.

Hints On Health By Red Cross

Up To You

Milk is an important part of the diet, says today's Red Cross health bulletin. It helps children to grow and grown-ups to replace worn-out tissues. Your department of health makes sure that the milk delivered at your door is pure and wholesome. After you get it it's up to you to keep it that way. In this changeable spring weather be sure to keep milk under 50 degrees in temperature and over 32 degrees. Freezing tends to break down food values in milk. Keep the cap on the bottle until it's empty to keep it clean.

Smokers Take Care

Fires are easy to start and hard to put out, says today's Red Cross safety bulletin. Smokers have a responsibility to others that they do not always realize. When discarding a cigar or cigaret on the floor or sidewalk make a habit of stamping on it to make sure it's out. Emptying pipe ashes into a waste basket is also a dangerous practice, and it's suicide to smoke in bed.

ABC's of Safety

Today's Red Cross Safety bulletin says, "If you have to pass a cup of hot coffee to anyone at the other end of the table, the safe thing to do is to get up and take it to them. Children have been badly scalded by having coffee spilled over them. An electric iron or percolator is dangerous if placed where children can trip over the cord. The ABC of safety is, 'Always Be Careful!'"

CHAPTER XXVIII

It was a shame she could not show them, and though she determined she would not let anyone see them, she felt her resistance weaken when Millicent Hinchshaw came to tea. Millicent, after all, was like a daughter—or soon would be, she hoped.

"Don't say anything about this, my dear," she said. "I couldn't resist the opportunity to buy them, because of course, one might never have such another chance in a lifetime. But just at this moment, when there's so much talk about unemployment and everything—And these will be heirlooms, something to hand down in the family forever—"

Her eyes met the girl's in the dressing-table mirror, as she sat before it admiring herself with ruffled flashings, and the same thought was in both their minds; Millicent might have a direct interest in this heirloom.

"Why, there's Seward's car?" Mrs. Ingram said, looking out of the window after she had looked the rubies in the wall-safe. "We'll go downstairs now, shall we? I've told them to serve tea under the big copper beech."

An army of gardeners assistants raked the Grangefields lawns, so that a leaf had hardly detached itself from its parent twig before it was swept into a bag to be burned. Under the fiery splendor of the trees the lawns stretched their spotless green velvet, and Millicent again voiced her admiration of the grounds, as Laura poured tea and thought what a perfect daughter-in-law this girl would make. Seward joined them a little late.

If he seemed rather abstracted, the other two did not notice it. Laura had conceived the idea of a house-party of young people, and was receiving more suggestions for names from Millicent than from her son. All this was interrupted by a servant with a small package on a tray. "For you, sir," said the man to Seward.

He took it without great interest, but, "Do you mind if I open it?" he asked. A registered package was at least more intriguing than the conversation.

The shape of the package indicated nothing and the handwriting was unfamiliar. He lifted the lid and then hastily put it on again and tried to bundle box, paper and all out of sight. But his mother had caught a blue flash and she leaned forward, attracted as always by the glimpse of jewels.

"What is it, dear? Why, who could be sending you anything like that—jewelry, surely?"

"A nothing," he muttered. "No? Do let me see!" She reached for the box, lifted out Cathleen's bracelet and let it dangle from her fingers. "How very pretty! And how indiscreet of me to make you show it. Of course you have bought this to give some lucky girl! If my birthday weren't just behind me, I'd hope that I were the girl!"

Seward was not listening. So Miss Cathleen McCarthy had sent the damned thing back. Why had she done that? Not a word with it—the little cheap box hadn't held even tissue paper, just the slumped heap of platinum links and colored lights. Seward was angry and puzzled and sulky, and deep inside him, a little glad, at having the trick returned.

He would have accepted his mother's suggestion that it was to be her Christmas present if his associations with the bracelet had been less painful. He said to Millicent, "Do you want it? You may have it."

Millicent uttered a little squeal of delight and clutched at it.

Laura stared at her son. "Well, of all the ungrateful ways of offering a tribute! Couldn't you at least say that it would make you very happy if I gave you this? I hope you will, my dear," she added to the girl. "Sapphires match your blue eyes!"

She was thinking, "They are engaged then, or on the verge of it, though he won't give me the satisfaction of letting me know it. He wouldn't of course, venture to offer her anything so valuable as this, unless there were a pretty clear understanding between them!"

Millicent thought, "He does mean to propose. This is paying the way. He certainly has queer manners, but he'd hardly offer me this, right under his mother's nose, unless he was really getting serious."

And Seward thought, "Has she got blue eyes? I never noticed." He shot a glance at them, and found they were indeed, a sort of pale China blue.

The remembered beauty of Cathleen's eyes suddenly stabbed him. They were the color of Mediterranean seas, full of depth and light and what he had taken to be soul. Angerily he blinked the vision of them away.

Patrick McCarthy brooded over the dishonor he firmly believed his family had suffered in the person of his daughter. "If I was only the man I was—" he raged, for he was nearer sixty than fifty, and suffering from a jumping heart. He might drop dead, the doctor had told him, if he became too excited.

He talked the problem over with Joe. "It's you that's the natural champion of your sister, seeing I'm no longer the man I was. If I was only ten years younger I wouldn't be putting this onto you; I wouldn't be letting anyone else have the sweet enjoyment of knocking the fella's teeth down his throat! But I wouldn't want to live to see your mother a widow.... So the job is yours, my boy, and it ought to be a pleasure to you!"

"Didn't I tell the girl," Joe blustered, "that it was my business to see how she behaved? Sure, I'll have a talk with Mr. Seward ingram and tell him where he gets off. Taking my sister and keeping her out with him the whole of a night. I'll have plenty to say to him. He'll understand the McCarthy's are people to be reckoned with!"

The words were strong drink to Patrick, but as time went by and Joe threats had not been turned into deeds, he spoke to Joe again. "As well not chastise the fella at all, as let so much grass grow under your feet while you're making up your mind to it," he said sourly. "There's a point you have to think about, dad," said Joe. "It's not that I don't want to give this guy a lesson. But me and Cathleen are both working for this guy's father. Say I beat up his son and he fires us both! How would we eat, the lot of the McCarthy's?"

The point was well taken, as Patrick had to admit. "Maybe you wouldn't need to spoil his looks on him," he argued. "Don't hit him at all, only put the fear of God in him. Tell him what he'll get if he comes around her again, make him smell your fist, and let him see you mean business!"

Joe was glad, indeed, he had put off his call on Seward when, a little later, his own affairs kinked into an inextricable snarl.

He had tried to keep a record, in a little notebook, of the company payments he had received and diverted to his own use. Often he forgot to put these down, and sometimes he used more of the company's money than he had meant to. He was nearly a hundred dollars behind, by his own muddled accounts, but in reality much more than that. He knew the office was on to him when the manager sent for him.

His face went chalk-white when Mr. Faber, the office manager, laid before him a sheet of paper that recorded his defalcations. He stood tongue-tied before the proof of his thefts, before the narrowest contemptuous eyes of his superior, before the imminent prospect of disgrace and prison.

"I'm going to send for the police now," Mr. Faber said, reaching for the receiver of his telephone. "You'll get ten years for this, you crooked little fool. You've ditched your whole life by these petty thefts. What made you think you could get away with it? Don't you know we have check-up men?"

"I never meant to steal a cent," Joe cried. "I haven't got a head for figures. I must have got your money and my own money mixed, see? Don't be hard on me, Mr. Faber. You tell me how much I'm out and I'll put the money back. I'll make it right!"

"I'll give you until Saturday," said Mr. Faber. "But don't try to pull a get-away. Now beat it and don't come back without the money. And remember we know where to look for you."

Joe skurried from the office badly shaken. He owed the company two hundred and sixteen dollars, according to the checker's report. What prospect did he have of raising such a sum? It was not likely that search of Cathleen's dresser would reveal another sapphire bracelet.

An obscure plan began to shape itself in his frightened mind. Maybe Seward could be made to pay in cash for the damage he had done to Cathleen's reputation! Say he found him somewhere and threatened him first with a brother's vengeance, and then let himself be bought off?

That way he'd kill two birds with one stone. He'd be able to pacify the old man with the story of what he'd said to Cathleen's betrayer, and get himself out of this hell of a mess he'd blundered into! And he wouldn't just stand young Ingram up for two hundred and twenty dollars either. He'd ask a lot more than that. Maybe a thousand. For what was a thousand to anybody as rich as him? No more than a lousy dime to other people. Why shouldn't he ask for five thousand, while he was about it?

Joe went into Tony's with his confidence somewhat restored. Gemma was perched on a stool at the bar, with Carmine Butti lounging beside her, his arm about her waist.

Carmine did not move nor take his arm away, so Joe had to range up on her other side, facing her back.

"Hello, kid," she threw him over her shoulder. He could see from the ripple of her cheek that she was smiling at the Italian, and he morosely ordered a drink. He did not know how to get Gemma's attention, and she and Carmine were talking in their own language, which infuriated him. But presently the telephone rang inside the bar and Tony answered it.

"It's your brother, Mr. Butti," Tony reported. "He says will you take the call upstairs?"

Carmine vanished, and Joe exclaimed, "Let's take our drinks over to the table," he urged Gemma. When they had made the move he said, "Gee, kid, you look like a million dollars today."

"I got a good night's sleep," she explained. "I always look all right after I get some sleep. These earnings look all right on me, too, don't you think so? Carmine gave them to me."

"Oh, he did? Snatched them off some dame, I bet!"

"What of it? I should care who had 'em first. I got 'em now."

"Gemma, I wish you'd lay off that guy. I wish you wouldn't let him give you things. I thought you were my girl!"

She laughed. "I'd get a long way on your presents, wouldn't I?"

"But you said you loved me."

"Sure, I love you. I think you're a sweet kid. But you mustn't be jealous. You don't own me, you know. I like Carmine, too. He's darn good-looking. Like a picture star! Then he's Italian, too, same as me. I like that. And he's going in partners now with his brother Vergie. That means he'll be in the money. Big money. You know a girl has to think what a fellow can do for her. Joe, I like you all right, but you'll never have any big money."

"That shows what you know about it, Gemma. I'm going to have some big money in just a little while, maybe tomorrow!"

"See you—," she drawled.

Carmine came downstairs, put his hand on Gemma's hatless head and perked it backward in a brief, possessive, rough caress, grinned at Joe with narrowed challenging eyes and strode out.

Gemma's eyes followed him, an expression in them Joe had never seen when she looked at him. "Did you read about that payroll stick-up last night?" she asked. "That was our gang, and it was him that got the cop! He don't ever lose his nerve, and always smiling. I don't blame you for not wanting to take the chances he does, Joe. All I'm saying is, if a fellow can take the chances and get away with it, then he can do a whole lot for the girl he likes."

"Yeah? Well, there's more ways than one of making money. I expect to pull down a few grand for myself in a day or so, without taking any chances—You wait, that's all."
